Taster Days

International Relations – Conflict Resolution – History - Peace Studies

We run taster days on campus at the university throughout the year which are available for anyone interested in applying for our degrees. We would like to extend that offer to school visits and invite your students who may be looking at further study in these areas. The taster sessions are subject specific and usually last about half a day.

While we have some subject specific taster days already planned, we would like to offer you the opportunity to book a visit for your individual school which we can cater specifically to your own needs. Below is a list the types of activities we can offer you, though we are happy to adapt the topics at your request.

These sessions are suitable for years 10-12 and we can take from 30-100 students per day.

A typical day would involve the following:

- Welcome to the University of Bradford talk
- A campus tour
- A mini lecture & interactive workshops
- Q&A sessions with current students

As a division, Peace Studies are happy to tailor a campus visit to your individual needs. In the past we have covered topics such as:

- Simulated Session of the UN Security Council on Syria Crisis
- How to understand the crisis in Syria and Iraq
- Ebola in Africa
- Legacies of World War
- History of Human Rights
- Women Peace and Conflict
